Photoworks Gallery, located in Historic Glen Echo Park, is proud to present United/Divided, a juried exhibition of photography. As an art institution showcasing photographers in the Washington Metropolitan Area, Photoworks is in a unique position to initiate a visual dialog that explores the connections and divisions that currently exist in our nation, and in our nation's capitol. Robert Miller, Deputy Director of Photography at The Washington Post, serves as the juror for the exhibition. Miller's journalistic focus is on the news and news images. He is currently covering the new administration, and for the last eighteen months covered the presidential campaign, as well as national enterprise for The Washington Post. The exhibition features 23 local photographers, who artistically and effectively document the twin themes of unity and division. Please find a list of exhibiting artists on the following page.
